Summary and Comment

¶1. (C) Panamanian President Martin Torrijos extended his "sincere congratulations" to Cuban President Raul Castro for his "well deserved designation to the highest government position in the Republic of Cuba, as a result of the very right and unanimous decision by the honorable Cuban General Assembly," an MFA press release announced on February 27. The press release expressed the desire to "strengthen even more during" Raul Castro's term the "frank relationships of friendship and cooperation that currently exist. The letter was sent on February 24. This glowing statement is in keeping with the Torrijos Administration's continuing desire to refrain from doing anything that would alienate Cuba. Continuing to present itself to the USG as a "bridge" to Cuba, Panama is also unlikely to do anything public that would cause it to incur Cuban wrath or even discomfort. The use of the term "frank" is curious, as there appears to be a lack of candor in the Cuba-Panamanian bilateral relationship. End summary and comment.
